DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Victor Lee Homeplace lies in an open hilly area on the western slope of Little Mountain, just west of Backbone Mountain.

This site consists of the Lee frame house, coal shed, outhouse, garage, springhouse, and bank barn.

The house is a two-story, three bay by one bay dwelling. The facade faces south and has an offset entrance. A one-story shed porch supported by four turned posts runs across the facade.

A one-story plank-constructed shed wing wraps around the rear, N elevation, and the west gable end of the house and extends to join the facade porch.

The foundation consists of stone piers covered with vertical boards. The walls are covered with weatherboard siding which has been covered with asphalt siding except for the north elevation of the wing and under the facade porch. The gable roof is covered with asphalt sheeting.

All windows are 2/2 sash with plain board surrounds. There is an interior brick and cinderblock chimney on the west side of the shed addition.

A frame coal shed lies directly behind the house at the NE corner. The frame springhouse lies just west of the house, and the frame bank barn is northwest of the house.
